AUGUST 2015 NEWSLETTER

“Teaching, if it is to be done well, must be built on vision and commitment; learning, if it is to be meaningful, depends on imagination, risk taking, intention, and invention.” — William Ayers

Dear Parents,

The month of August has been a foundational one at Indus Early Learning Centre as students and teachers have focused on settling into classroom routines and establishing relationships within their community of learners. The students have adjusted to school well after the summer holidays and are all happily participating in the wide variety of activities, projects and events that are a part of daily school life at IELC. We had our first special assembly to celebrate the 69th Indian Independence Day on August 14th, where we gathered and shared the significance of the day followed by singing of the Indian national anthem. Students also collaboratively created the tri-colour flag and proudly displayed the flag in the school lobby.

Gender Sensitization Workshop

Our PYP Counselor and Psychologist Dr. Khaier from Indus International School conducted our first Gender Sensitization Workshop on August 26th, 2015 for the students of Reception and Prep. This sensitive topic was explained through a child-friendly and age-appropriate video followed by a lively discussion. Dr. Khaier also conducted a puppet show reinforcing the concept of keeping safe. Since children learn best through reinforcement, the class teachers will be discussing related topics during circle time which is conducted every morning and is a wonderful opportunity for students to share their thoughts and build an environment of trust, sharing and caring.

Talent Development

IELC's uniqueness lies in our commitment to develop talent in our students and nurture it as a process. In our quest to develop talent and as part of our commitment to impart the whole- curriculum, we provide myriad activities and opportunities for students especially in the areas of music, kinaesthesia, multiple languages, creativity and numeracy. Apart from skill-building, this helps children become active learners, well-rounded and engaged individuals, and contributes to the success of their academic achievements.
