“Life doesn't count for much unless you're willing to do your small part to leave our children – all of our children – a better world. Even if it's difficult. Even if the work seems great. Even if we don't get very far in our lifetime.” – Barrack Obama

I like this quote by Barrack Obama because it focuses on little children, and what we as parents and educators can do to ensure that we leave behind a better world for our little ones.

Today, the world isn't like it used to be. Things are changing at an alarming rate, and as we watch we also understand that we have to change with the times, and what better way to do it than give children the Leadership skills that will ensure that they are equipped to shine in the future. Keeping this in mind, apart from our usual events, we also celebrated Grandparents Day at school. This activity instilled in the learners the importance of empathy, love, respect and discipline.

Grandparents Day Celebrations –

We celebrated Grandparents Day on the 9th of September. We are happy to say that a lot of grandparents and even a great grandparent visited the school to share their stories and spend valuable time with the learners. The enthusiasm that the children and grandparents displayed gave us immense joy and they left us with a promise of visiting the school more often!

Art and Craft

We believe that recycling is the best way to contribute to the environment and that is the reason we use a lot of recycled materials in our art class. These activities are not only fun, but they also focus on imagination and exploration which in turn helps to develop their creativity further. These pictures provide you a glimpse of the things the children have made in their art and craft class.

New Beginnings...

We are happy that we are now a part of the “Early Childhood Association.” This platform gives us an opportunity to interact with other educators and professionals from around the world. It also provides us an insight into other domains that are being explored and used to further improve the learning environment for our little ones.

Wishing you a great weekend. Stay Blessed!

Regards,
Rachna
