Dear Parents,

Pre Primary and Primary education is the most important step in a child's personal and educational life. It is a crucial stage of development and it plays an important role in creating lifelong learners. A term you have perhaps heard us using quite frequently at Indus! Research suggests that brain development is at its peak during the formative years of human life and the formative years set the foundation for adult life. Hence it is very important that we, who are the primary caregivers of the child, ensure that the child is always in an environment which facilitates cognitive development and encourages curiosity and creativity. The child can work towards maximizing his true potential, only, if there is a strong partnership between the parent and the school and both parties are working close together. I would like to thank all the parents of the IJS for being actively involved in the school and for the constant feedback of ideas on how we can improve ourselves.

I'm sure you would agree with me that experiential learning is one of the best ways of learning. Many educationists believe it is the best way of learning as it is the process of making meaning from direct experience. Simply put, Experiential Learning is learning from experience. Aristotle once said, "For the things we have to learn before we can do them, we learn by doing them." Facilitating and creating opportunities for experiential learning is part of our teaching methodology here at Indus.

Indus Day is fast approaching. The children are currently rehearsing very diligently for the performances for their big day on March 18th, 2017. We request the parents to send their child to school every day as their absence will directly affect the practice sessions.
